a political vindication. It has been said by competent observers of conditions over there that there were turns during 1918 which would have made it possible for him to unseat the Lloyd George government if he had been willing to take advantage of them. But apparently he preferred to keep his patriotism before his party prejudices or personal ambitions, and there were occasions when he actually helped the doughty Welshman out of tight places.

Now, however, things seem about to swing if not in his

President Jacobs' Memorial day committee is composed of people who know how to get things done, and to set the plans for the reception to the returned service men off with a running start. The big thing in an undertaking of that sort is to get the whole community interested in it. Enough people should be put to work on assignments of various sorts to insure that the whole county is thoroughly stirred up early. Another thing that ought to be looked after at an early date is the transportation to Fairmont and back to their homes again of the people who live out in the county. This affair is to be a county affair in fact as well as in name, and every effort should be made to get the people here and away again with the least possible inconvenience
